Gigamon®

Zero Trust for the New Normal

EMEA survey reveals challenges facing IT and security leaders, top priorities for the next 12 months and attitudes towards the adoption of Zero Trust.

Increasing threatscape

84% of IT decision makers have reported an increase in cyberthreats this year, with 51% believing that the shift to WFH has increased vulnerability

41% have been subject to an increase in phishing schemes

33% have been subject to an increase in data breaches

33% have faced an increased insider threat due to disengaged employees

Top IT and security priorities facing organisations

On top of adapting to the increasing threat landscape, businesses in EMEA expect to prioritise the following for the remainder of the year:

44%

Keeping developments safe and secure in the cloud

41%

Ensuring no security breaches or compromises

37%

Maintaining work from home infrastructure

Why Zero Trust?

76% of respondents said it would be unwise not to consider Zero Trust given the increasing attack surface

In fact, two-thirds have adopted or plan to adopt the Zero Trust framework in order to:

Secure the network and mitigate risk

54%

Protect data and make it easier to manage

51%

Reduce the risk of employees compromising the system

49%

Key benefits of Zero Trust

IT and security decision-makers reported the following benefits after beginning their Zero Trust journey:

87% Improved productivity without compromising security

97% Helps business as it deals with the current global situation

67% Helps businesses become more agile

Download the full report here